LERU Doctoral Summer School 2015

- Place: University of Oxford, Great Britain
- Time: 13-17 July 2015
- Topic: “Sharing Excellence – The Value of Knowledge Exchange”
- Theme: Knowledge Exchange
The Summer School is focused on the mutually beneficial sharing of ideas, data, experience, and expertise between academics and non-academic organisations or the public as a means of fostering innovation and excellence. This sharing of knowledge and expertise is a two-way, dynamic process, distinct from the one-way dissemination of research findings.
- Who can attend? Outstanding doctoral candidates from all academic disciplines and various cultural backgrounds
- being keenly motivated to work on the topic,
 - being preferably well-advanced with their doctoral project and
 - being fluent in written and spoken English
- Costs: 500,- Euro including the course, course materials, accommodation in an Oxford college for five nights and meals and up to 200,- Euro (travel expenses)
both will be funded by IGA
- Program: The programme will include a range of activities designed to facilitate learning and skill development, including workshops, plenary sessions, arts-/sciences-focused case study discussions, networking opportunities, and a visit to industry. In addition participants will also be engaged through the duration of the summer school in small group task to design and then present a potential knowledge exchange project in a concluding showcase.
